Safe Looted on
P. & L. E. Train
Near Webster

By Associated Press.
PITTSBURGH, June 17.—The Fairmont Express on the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad was held up near Webster, about 25 miles from here, at 10:10 this morning by two masked men who, after robbing the baggage car, escaped.

The express, known as No. 55, from Fairmont to Pittsburgh, left Brownsville at 9:40. It is believed the burglars boarded the train at that point. They entered the baggage car as the train neared Webster and after binding and gagging Axel Hicks, express messenger, and M. Amher, baggage man, they looted a safe. At Webster the bandits did not wait for the train to stop. They jumped at a street crossing where an automobile containing two men was waiting. As the robbers entered the machine the car started in the direction of Pittsburgh.

At the offices of the American Railway Express Company it was said very little money was carried on the train and while no report had been made of the robbery the loss to the express company would not exceed $100. Pittsburgh & Lake Erie officials also were without information concerning the robbery.

As soon as the people at Webster realized what had happened numbers of them jumped into automobiles and set out in pursuit.

MINERS ALLOWED TO MEET UNDER ORDER OF COURT

By Associated Press.
LEANSBURG, Pa., June 17.—Judge McCann in court here today granted the United Mine Workers a preliminary injunction against the Vinton Collieries Company. It prohibits the company from interfering with the union in the enjoyment of its property in Vinton and allows the union to hold public meetings there, upholding the contention of Arthur Garfield Hays of the American Civil Liberties Union insofar as it pertains to the union property.

Immediately after the judge handed down his opinion, President John Murphy, J. J. Kinter of Lock Haven, Mr. Hays and other union representatives prepared to go to Vinton where they said they would hold a meeting on the lot owned by the union in that town.

Petition for the injunction was filed last week and this morning set for the hearing. The collieries company was not represented when court opened and after waiting 30 minutes Judge McCann, himself, Mr. Hays and Mr. Kinter picked a number of authorities to show why the injunction should be granted. Judge McCann said he was not at all sure that the claims of all the defendants were identical, the petition having recited not only the collieries company but also the Vinton Collieries, the expressed belief the hearing should be postponed until the company was represented.

Mr. Hays then asked if the entire matter could be considered that the judge grant an injunction preventing the company from interfering with the United Mine Workers in the use of their own property in Vinton and the injunction along that line was granted.

"The situation in Vinton is of course," said Mr. Hays in his argument, "it is not an American town. There is such thing as a closed town in a democratic such as that in which we live." He declared Judge McCann, interrupting him, Judge McCann then announced a hearing on the full petition would be held Monday morning next.

The popularity of Schepes among the Italians of this district has been evidenced by the number who inquire for him daily at the hospital. Schepes is a single man.

Police reports today were that no new developments have been uncovered. Chief Murphy remarked this morning that the county detective had not yet been to this city to make an investigation.

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 17.—State of liquor on shipping board vessels outside the three-mile limit is permissible under the new Treasury regulations issued today, according to T. A. Voss, general counsel for the prohibition.

This interpretation is taken as settling for the time being the controversy over liquor on government ships precipitated by Adolphus Busch, St. Louis brewer, when he wrote President Harding that the government was engaged in the bootlegging business by permitting sale of alcoholic beverages on shipping board vessels.

Region Operators Plan to Sue Unions for Damages

Based on the action on the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Coronado Coal Company case, which held that labor organizations are liable for damages resulting from strikes, it is understood that certain coal and coke operators in the Connellsville region are planning to enter suit against the United Mine Workers locally.

The actions will be civil although it is possible that criminal liability may be alleged in connection with some of the recent outbreaks where property has been damaged and non-union workers subjected to personal violence. The principal contention of the operators will be that they have sustained damages through the action of the operators in their efforts to

MERCURY SOARS
TO 96; HIGHEST
MARK OF SEASON

The temperature reached its highest point of the year yesterday when 96 degrees in the shade was recorded by the "offic" thermometer. At noon today the mercury was up to 86 degrees in the shade but old General Hantz was making his presence known and the heat had a greater effect than at any time yesterday.

The minimum temperature for last night was 68 degrees and although this is a warm mark for night time, a cool wind made it possible to sleep. A light rain fell about 11:30 o'clock and flashed in the distant sky threatened to fulfill the weather man's forecast of thunder-showers but they failed to materialize. The same prediction is carried in today's weather report and an overcast sky at noon gave foundation to the announcement.

Schepes May Yet Recover, Despite His Five Wounds

Charles Schepes, Italian clerk in the foreign department of the First National Bank, who was shot five times by an unknown assailant in the restaurant operated by Angelo Umbria in Water street Wednesday evening, seemed a little better today, according to information in the Cottage State Hospital. He spent a "fairly good night" and is resting easily today. The attending physician now believes the man has a chance for recovery.

At first little hope was held out for the life of the shooting victim, the result of one bullet which went through the left lung and lodged in the abdomen, being feared. X-ray pictures of the wounds were taken Thursday.

The popularity of Schepes among the Italians of this district has been evidenced by the number who inquire for him daily at the hospital. Schepes is a single man.

Police reports today were that no new developments have been uncovered. Chief Murphy remarked this morning that the county detective had not yet been to this city to make an investigation.

MINORITY ON RAIL BOARD ACCUSED OF FOMENTING STRIKE

Have Sown "Some of Seeds That Have Blossomed" Into Russian Anarchy.

325,000 FEEL WAGE CUT

Chief Among Them Are Clerks, Stationary Firemen and Signal Men; Strike Ballots Will Go Out Tonight to Members of the Units Affected.

By Associated Press.
CHICAGO, June 17.—Majority members of the United States Railroad Labor Board yesterday ordered a cut of $27,000,000 in wages of the rail workers today replied to criticisms of minority members of the board with the charge that the dissenting members presented "incendiary arguments in a strange and exaggerated effort to inflame the members to strike against the decisions of the board." The minority, consisting of two of the three labor members, were accused of "sowing" some of the seeds that have germinated and blossomed into industrial anarchy in Russia.

Yesterday's decision, which affected wages of 325,000 clerks, signal men and stationary firemen, brought total reductions effective July 1, under the board's orders, to $135,040,000. Approximately 1,200,000 employees are affected by the order.

CHICAGO, June 17.—Pruning nearly $27,000,000 from the annual payroll of 325,000 railway employees by cutting clerks, signalmen and stationary firemen from two to six cents an hour the United States Railroad Labor Board made another wage slash, bringing total reductions under the board's orders up to $135,000,000, beginning July 1.

Approximately 1,200,000 railway employees will share the total reduction, which has brought vigorous protest from every organization involved and is expected to result in a strike vote of 10 railroad labor bodies.

The bulk of those hit by the new cut will be 265,000 clerks and 100,000 station employees.

"That the carrier shall have a fair opportunity to profit by the revival of business in order that they may expand it, is absolutely indispensable to their efficient service to the American public," made the cut necessary, the decision said.

The dissenting opinion took the majority to task for the cut and declared there could be "no question that a very great pressure had been brought to bear on the board from different sources, making it difficult to consider the case on its merits."

The labor members charged that the majority had "taken over the typical employers' approach to the problems of the working man."

The labor member, estimated that the 325,000 men covered by the decision had lost $13,659,875 through wage reductions, less on changes in rules and on account of the reduction of forces in the last year.

CINCINNATI, June 17.—Strike ballots to stationary firemen and others with instructions to general committees who are to decide whether to take a strike vote will be in the mail tonight following the decision of the Railroad Labor Board last night cutting wages. Clerks and station employees will not take a general strike ballot. E. H. Fitzgerald, grand president of the Brotherhood, announced, "He said the general committee on each union would determine whether or not a strike ballot would be issued and when the men would be bound by the result. There will be no walkout on a number of roads which have agreements with the men which binds them to accept any wage cut by the board."

A meeting between the presidents of railroad unions and the miners, to order a cooperative agreement, to end the strike demands on the part of John L. Lewis, president of the miners, who was elected today, was held in Chicago.

Coal Production on The M. & W. Gains

WHEELING, W. Va., June 14.—Miners are returning to work at various mines located along the Morgantown & Wheeling branch of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. In the 56 days, April 23, the first railroad cars were loaded at several mines and during the week ending April 29, these mines produced 1,150 tons. For the week ending June 10, rail and figures show that 5,450 tons were mined and shipped.

NEWS OF DAY AT MOUNT PLEASANT BRIEFLY RELATED

Council Refuses to Pay $800 for Services of Engineering Firm.

ORIGINAL AMOUNT $300

Special to The Courier.

MOUNT PLEASANT, June 17.—Council, at a special meeting last evening, voted against settlement of the bill of Gannett, Sealey and Fleming, engineering firm engaged in connection with the light against increase in rates by the Mount Pleasant Water Company, on the basis demanded by the firm. It was decided there shall be no payment other than what has been made. During the preliminary to the rate contest, which was eventually dropped, the engineering firm was engaged to make a survey. The understanding between council and the representative of the firm, it was said, was that the cost of the borough would be $300. When the bill was received it amounted to $800. Council made payment of the amount of the original understanding.

Council voted to instruct Burgess William M. Overholt that after today the services of the policeman at the Diamond can be dispensed with; that three officers will be sufficient for the protection of the town.

Another Teacher Necessary.

With the growth of the Daily Vacation Bible School it has been necessary for the committee in charge to select another teacher. Beginning Monday morning Miss Sadie Lemmon will assist Miss Anna Berthel at the Reformed Church. Miss Lemmon lives near Kocksburg.

At the First Baptist Church tomorrow the subject for the morning service will be "How Repay the Lord." In the evening there will be Children's Day exercises.

His Friend Recommended Them.

"Six years ago," writes W. H. Shadwell, Stanley, Va., "I had kidney trouble, and at times was unable to raise myself in bed. Foley Kidney Pills were recommended to me by the Chief of the Fire Department. After using 3 bottles I was completely relieved and have never had a return of the symptoms. Why suffer when you can get relief from rheumatic pains, backache, swollen, sore and stiff joints, sleep disturbing bladder weakness and other symptoms of disordered kidneys. Sold everywhere. Thru Smoke and Flame.

The story of a frantic rush through burning rooms for valuable papers left in some "home-made" hiding place is reported daily in almost every paper. Sometimes there is tragedy as a result—sometimes not, but there always is the fact that life and valuables were risked needlessly in communities affording the protection of banks and safety deposit boxes. The Citizens National Bank offers you perfect protection for your valuables for 25 cents a month. Can you afford to run further risks?—Advertisement.

WEST PENN HANDS ATHLETICS OF UNIONTOWN A TRIMMING; ONLY THREE HITS ALLOWED

Thorpe and Labiak Do Good Work on the Mound for Railways Men.

TENNIS MATCHES PLAYED

The West Penn baseball team, an outstanding outfit in the City League race here, yesterday evening defeated the Athletics, contenders for the title in the Uniontown City League, by a score of 4-2. The game went for seven innings.

The railway team started the ball rolling by scoring a run in the opening frame, increasing this by a brace in the fourth and another in the fifth. Thorpe allowed only two hits in five innings, and followed by Labiak who was touched for one in the last two frames.

The Uniontown league stars managed to score in the sixth, squeezing a lone tally across, but the West Penn lead was never in danger. A. Frazier got the longest blow of the game, poling one for three bases.

Herwick and Carr Winners in Tennis Matches Yesterday

In the ladder tournament contests on the Connelville Tennis Association courts last evening two hotly contested matches were played off. In the first O. R. Herwick, the challenger, defeated Dubson, who had been holding second place. The match went three sets. Dubson taking the first, 6-2. The scores in the remaining sets which went to Herwick, were 6-2 and 6-4.

In the other match Floto was defeated by H. D. Carr, also the challenger. Carr took a big lead on Floto in the early part of the first set, having Max at one time 5-2. Floto made a strong comeback, but Carr finally won the set, 8-6. In the second set Carr defeated Floto 6-4. The next tournament matches will be played on Monday.

Wright's Team Increases Lead Over Wilhelm's

The W. L. Wright team increased its lead over the outfit of R. E. Wilhelm in the horsemanship tournament of the W. A. Eddie Bible Class of the First Presbyterian Church in games played Thursday evening. The Wright aggregation won 13 to seven for the trailers. Each side was represented by four teams.

W. L. Wright, matched with J. R. Davidson, made a strong comeback against C. W. Downs, playing with Dr. B. T. Miller, winning four out of the five contests. The Wright team are now leading Wilhelm's toppers by a total of 19 games.

The Poplar Grove Klairdies are scheduled to play at Dunbar this afternoon, the game to be called at 4 o'clock. Other games on the Klairdies schedule are: Monday, Bucket of Blood team of the West Side, at Poplar Grove, Wednesday, Rainbows, at Poplar Grove, and Friday evening the Baltimore & Ohio team at Fayette Field. The Covenanter team of the Church League plays at Poplar Grove Monday, June 24. Games called at 7:30 o'clock.

The First Presbyterians lost to the Covenanters in a Church League game at Fayette Field yesterday evening. The score was 5-9. The Presbyterians were unable to do anything with Covenanter offerings and they were also up against a team of good fielders.

Next Wednesday evening the West Penn team and the Connelville Maylars will play at Fayette Field. The Maylars are getting some of the best colored players of the region here for the game.

Wells, a classmate of "Tumble" Randolph at Bethany College, is also to get a try-out with the Detroit Tigers. He will go there next week. Randolph will report Monday. He is now at his home in Dunbar township.

Sammy Labiak has returned from the West where he has been playing semi-pro baseball. He has been signed by the West Penn team to play third base and pitcher. He served in both positions in last evening's clash with the Uniontown Athletics, letting down the better on that team with one hit in two innings.

He played for the Connelville Independents last year.

The New York Giants won their third straight from the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday. The score was 7-1. Pittsburgh dropped into third place despite the defeat handed St. Louis by Brooklyn.

Forbes Field, the home of the Pittsburgh Nationals, is to be enlarged.

In a baseball league, there does not seem anything worse than eighth place.

EXPLANATION OF GOLF SWING

Bob McDonald, Professional at Bob of Links Course, Chicago, Makes Suggestion.

"The golf swing should not be modified on batting in baseball, but on throwing," says Bob McDonald, pro at the Bob of Links course in Chicago, "where there is the same turn of the body and the same snap of the wrist. Men through generations have been taught how to throw, where women haven't. So the male of the species has this advantage to say nothing of greater physical power." Yet some instructors and a few on-lookers at critical times, by their leaves into the stands and far from the spot aimed at, indicate that their throwing education is imperfect.

Inspecting Piston-Rings

Wall Fit, Groove Fit and End Clearance Should Be Checked Up

SOME IDEA AS TO WHETHER the gap between the ends of a ring is excessive can be obtained as the piston is being taken out, for if the piston is pushed in just enough so that the top ring is just beginning to come out of the bore, the distance between its ends, when in position, can be seen and easily measured, and the same observations can be made on each of the other rings successively, as it comes into sight. When installed, the gap in an ordinary sized ring is around 1-64 inch and, if the gap is found upon inspection to be many times this amount, it indicates either poor fitting or very great wear, with the probability that there is considerable leakage at this point. If when the piston is removed, the rings are found jammed in their grooves, soaking the piston overnight in kerosene will remove most of this gummy material, so that it can be ascertained whether the rings are excessively loose in their grooves on account of wear. If they are, gas will pass out under them from above and compression will be lost. A ring should have hardly perceptible up-and-down play in its groove, but should be perfectly free to swing in and out, and if it has very noticeable freedom of up and down movement, it should be replaced. When it is decided which rings are to be discarded, they can be sprung out of their grooves by forcing their ends apart and worked out of the end of the piston, no special care being required in handling them, as they are of no further use. The treatment of the new ones which are to take their places should, however, be much more gentle, as piston rings are easily broken by rough usage. A pair of special piston-ring pliers, designed to expand the ring evenly and to hold it thus, while being slid into its groove, is a great convenience.

RECHARGING MAGNETS

J. J. K. asks: What is the best method for recharging the magnets of a high-tension magneto? Answer: They can be recharged, without removal, as follows: Obtain a sufficient length of heavy conductor flexible cord and wind it into a temporary coil around the magnets by threading it through the arch. Then connect one end of this coil to one terminal of a large storage battery (the ordinary car battery will do) and touch the other end of the coil to the other battery terminal momentarily, several times. Before doing this, determine the existing polarity of the magnets with a compass and be sure that the connections are such as to change in the same direction and not to disarrange the polarity.

Electric service stations usually have the required battery and all other equipment for doing this work. Some prefer to remove the magnets and charge them by contact with a magnetizer (a special electric current charged from an external current source).

GROWING GEARS

R. M. D. asks: What do you think is the matter with the rear end of my Ford? At a 12 m. p. h. speed there is an uneven growl, but at higher and lower speeds it is not so noticeable. It is rather bad when the car is going down hill and on rough roads, but not very objectionable on smooth roads. Answer: On the face of it, this sounds like incorrect or irregular meshing of the final drive gears, assuming, of course, that your lubrication is all right. Wear of the thrust washers, provided between the inside roller-bearing supports of the axle shafts and the differential, would permit some play of the ring gear. Excessive wear of the axle shafts and the differential would also cause uneven gear meshing. Rough roads would cause the results of worn bearings to show up strongly. You may have to take the rear and front shafts into all end and radial bearing play and secure a correct gear mesh.

To "Tell" Good Material in Clothing

By Wright-Metzler Co.
It is easy without question and without exception that there are "minute gradations of quality in fabrics, from the coarse, "burly" inferior varieties all the way to these fine long yarn fabrics that feel almost like silk to the touch.

The "feel" of the material is the main guide that is possible to the purchaser of men's clothing. The chemical tests that can be made by the buyer of yard goods are impractical and not impossible in the purchase of ready-to-wear garments.

The feel of a material is a guide to its contents: cotton feels soft and lustrous; all wool material is springy and sturdy. Close, even, firm weaves are usually enduring, while loose ones catch on small obstructions, pull out of shape and look shabby. Cloth may be wiry and enduring, or smooth, strong and shiny but requiring much care, or it may be soft and easily mussed. Wiry cloth is adapted to hard wear; while the soft materials are more for dress.

By holding the cloth to light, imperfections of weave may become evident, threads that have been repaired may be detected; and an undue openness of texture can be seen. Each fabric, according to its use, should have weight sufficient for ordinary endurance. This quality is tested by appearance to the eye and the feel when pressed in the hand.

These hints may prove helpful to the buyers of men's clothing, although he will not need any such knowledge if he is positive that his clothes are a man of responsibility who will not take advantage of his customer's ignorance of fabrics and their value.

By EDWINA

The lad blew out his candle, but he went to his window instead of his bed. The moonlight was brilliant among the trees and on the sleeping flowers and the slow run of the broad river, and it was very still out there, and very lovely, but he had not and wish to be out there. With wind and storm and sun, moon and stars, he had lived face to face all his life, but here they were not the same. Trees, flowers, house, people had reared some wall between him and them, and they seemed now to be very far away. Everybody had been kind to him—all but Hugh. Felted hostility he had never known before and he could not understand. Everybody had surely been kind, and yet—he turned to his bed, and all night his brain was flashing to and fro between the real of vivid pictures etched on it in a day and the grim background that had hitherto been his life beyond the hills.

From pioneer habit he awoke before dawn, and for a moment the softness where he lay puzzled him, but he could smell the dawn and he started to spring up. He felt hot and stuffy, though Harry had put up his windows, and he could not lie there wide awake. He could not go out in the heavy dew in the ray clothes and fragile shoes he had taken off, so he slid into his own buckskin clothes and leggings and out the still open front door and down the path toward the river. Instinctively he had picked up his rifle, bullet-pouch and powder-horn. An hour later he looped back on his own tracks.

At the front door Harry hailed him and Barbara came running out.

"I forgot to get you another suit of clothes last night," he said, "and we were scared this morning. We thought tored it on the steps. The Kentuckian was bewildered and his face flushed. He ran for the weapon.

"You can't do that again."

"I don't believe I can," laughed Hugh.

"Will you learn me some more?" asked the boy eagerly.

"I surely will."

A little later Barbara and her cousin were trotting snarling along a sandy road through the fields with the colonel and Hugh looping in front of them. Evidently was a black, mottled, some graying. He had roared and plunged when Hugh mounted, and even now he was clamping his bit and leaping playfully at times, but he had not hit with an unconscious of his capers that held the Kentucky boy's eyes.

"Gosh," he said, "but Hugh can ride! I wonder if he could stay on him bareback."

"I suppose so," Barbara said. "Hugh can do anything."

Many questions the little girl asked—and some of the boy's answers made her shudder.

"Papa said last night that several of our kinsfolk spoke of going to your country in a party, and Harry and Hugh are crazy to go with them. Papa said people would be swarming over the Cumberland mountains before long."

"I wish you'd come along," Barbara laughed.

"I wouldn't like to lose my hair," Hugh said.

"I'll watch out for that," said the boy with such confident gravity that Barbara turned to look at him.

"I believe you would," she murmured. And presently:

"What did the Indians call you?"

"White Arrow."

"White Arrow. That's lovely. Why?"

"I could outrun all the other boys."

"Then you'll have to run tomorrow when we go to the fair at Williamsburg."

"The fair?"

Barbara explained.

For an hour or more they had driven and there was no end to the fields of tobacco and grain.

"Are we still on your land?" Barbara laughed. "Yes; we can't drive around the plantation and get back for dinner. I think we'd better turn now."

"Pardon me," said the lad. "What's that?"

Barbara waved her whip.

"Why, all this—the land—the farm."

"Oh!"

"It's called Red Oaks—from those big trees back of the house."

"Oh, I know you well—all of 'em." She wheeled the ponies and with fresh zest they scampered for home. Everybody had gathered for the noon-day dinner when they swung around the great trees and up to the back porch just as they were starting in the Kentucky boy gave a cry and darted down the path. A towering figure in coonskin cap and hunter's garb was huddled at the sun-dial and looking toward them.

"Now, I wonder who that is," said Colonel Dale. "Jupiter, but that can't be!"

They saw the tall stranger stare wonderingly at the boy and throw back his head and laugh. Then the two came on together. The boy was still flushed but the hunter's face was grave.

"This is Dave," said the boy simply.

"Dave Xantell," added the stranger, smiling and taking off his cap. "I've been at Williamsburg to register some lands and I thought I'd come and see how this young man is getting along."

Colonel Dale went quickly to meet him with outstretched hand.

"You mighty glad you are," he said heartily. "Erskine has already told us about you. You are just in time for dinner."

"That's mighty kind," said Dave. And the ladies, after he was presented, still looked at him with much curiosity and great interest. Truly, strange visitors were coming to Red Oaks these days.

That night the subject of Hugh and Harry going back home with the two Kentuckians was broached to Colonel Dale, and to the wondering delight of the two boys both fathers seemed to consider it favorably. Mr. Brockton was going to England for a visit, the summer was coming on, and both fathers thought it would be a great benefit to their sons. Even Mrs. Dale, on whom the hunter had made a most agreeable impression, smiled and said she would already be willing to trust her son with their new guests anywhere.

"I shall take good care of him, madam," said Dave with a bow.

Colonel Dale, too, was greatly taken with the stranger, and he asked many questions of the new land beyond the mountains. There was dancing again that night, and the hunter, towering a head above them all, looked on with smiling interest. He even took part in a square dance with Miss Jane Wilkings, handling his great bulk with astonishing grace and lightness of foot. Then the older gentlemen slipped into the drawing-room to their port and pipes, and the boy Erskine waited after them and listened entranced to the talk of the coming war.

Colonel Dale had been in Hanover ten years before, when one Patrick Henry voiced the first intimation of independence in Virginia; Henry, a country storekeeper—bankrupt; farmer—bankrupt; storekeeper again, and bankrupt again; an idler, hunter, fisher, and glory-seeker—even a "par-you had left us, and Barbara blushed, nearly cried. Barbara blushed now and did not deny it.

"I Was Rude to You Last Night and I Owe You an Apology."

"Come to breakfast," she cried.

"Did you find anything to shoot?" Harry asked.

"Nothin' but some squirrels," said the lad.

Then Hugh came in pale of face and looking rather sick. He went straight to the Kentuckian.

"It was rude to you last night and I owe you an apology."

He thrust out his hand and awkwardly the boy rose and took it.

"And you'll forgive me, too, Barbara?"

"Of course I will," she said happily, but holding up one finger of warning—should he ever do it again. The rest of the guests trooped in now, and some were going out on horseback, some for a sail, and some visiting up the river in a barge, and all were paired off.

"I'm going to drive Cousin Erskine over the place with my ponies," said Barbara, "and—"

"I'm going back to bed," interrupted Hugh, "or read a little Latin and Greek with Mr. Brockton. There was impudence as well as humor in this, for the tutor had given up Hugh in despair long ago.

Barbara shook her head.

"You are going with us," she said.

"I want Hugh to ride with me," said Colonel Dale, "and give Erskine a little exercise. Nobody else can ride him."

The Kentucky boy turned a challenging eye, as did every young man at the table, and Hugh felt very comfortable. While every one was getting ready, Harry brought out two fowls and two masks on the porch a little later.

"We fight with those," he said, pointing to the crossed rapiers on the wall. "But we practice with these. Hugh, there, is the champion fencer," he said, "and he'll show you."

Harry helped the Kentucky boy to mask and they crossed fowls—Hugh giving instructions all the time and adding approval.

"You'll learn—you'll learn fast," he said, and over his shoulder to Harry: "Why, his wrist is as strong as mine now, and he's got an eye like a weasel."

With a twist he wrenched the foil from its antagonist's hand and clatkeeper," as Mr. Jefferson once dubbed him, because Henry had once helped his father-in-law to a hop tavern. That far back Colonel Dale had heard Henry denounce the clergy, stigmatize the king as a tyrant who had forfeited all claim to obedience, and had seen the orator caught up on the shoulders of the crowd and amidst shouts of applause borne around the courthouse square. He had seen the same Henry ride into Richmond two years later on a lean horse, with papers in his saddle-pockets, his expression grim, his tall figure stooping, a peculiar twinkle in his small blue eyes, his brown wig without powder, his coat pencil-blossom in color, his knee-breeches of leather, and his stockings of yarn. The speaker of the Burgess was on a dais under a red canopy supported by gilded rods, and the clerk sat beneath with a mace on the table before him, but Henry called for liberty of speech, and the shouts of treason fell thick and there to save Virginia for the king. The lad's brain whirled. What did all this mean? Who was this king and what had he done? He had known but the one from whom he had run away. When he got Dave alone he would leave and learn the secret of everything. And then the young people came quietly in and sat down quietly, and Colonel Dale, divining what they wanted, got Dave started on stories of the wild wilderness that was his home—the first chapter in the life of Kentucky. On the banks of the Ohio, and the thickets that separated Cataraugus, Crooks and Cherokees on the south from Delaware, Wyandottos and Shawnees on the north, who fought one another, and all of whom the whites must fight. How the first fort was built, and the first woman stood on the banks of the Kentucky river. He told of the perils and hardships of the first journeys—bitter-fights with wild beasts and wild men, chases, hand-to-hand combats, escapes and massacres—and out the breathing of his listeners could be heard the sound of their own voices. And he came finally to the story of the attack on the fort, the raising of a small hand above the cane, palm outward, and the swift dash of a slender brown body into the fort, and then, seeing the boy's face turn scarlet, he did not tell how that same lad had slipped back into the woods even while the fight was going on, and slipped back with the bloody scalp of his enemy, but ended with the timely coming of the Virginians, led by the lad's father, who got his death-wound at the very gate. The tense breathing of his listeners culminated now in one general deep breath.

DESIGN FOR UP-TO-DATE BARN

All Latest Labor-Saving Devices and Sanitary Stall Equipment Are Included in the Plans—Provides 40 Stalls.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give FREE LITERATURE on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the reader of this paper. On receipt of his wife experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 227 Park Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only include two-cent stamp for reply.

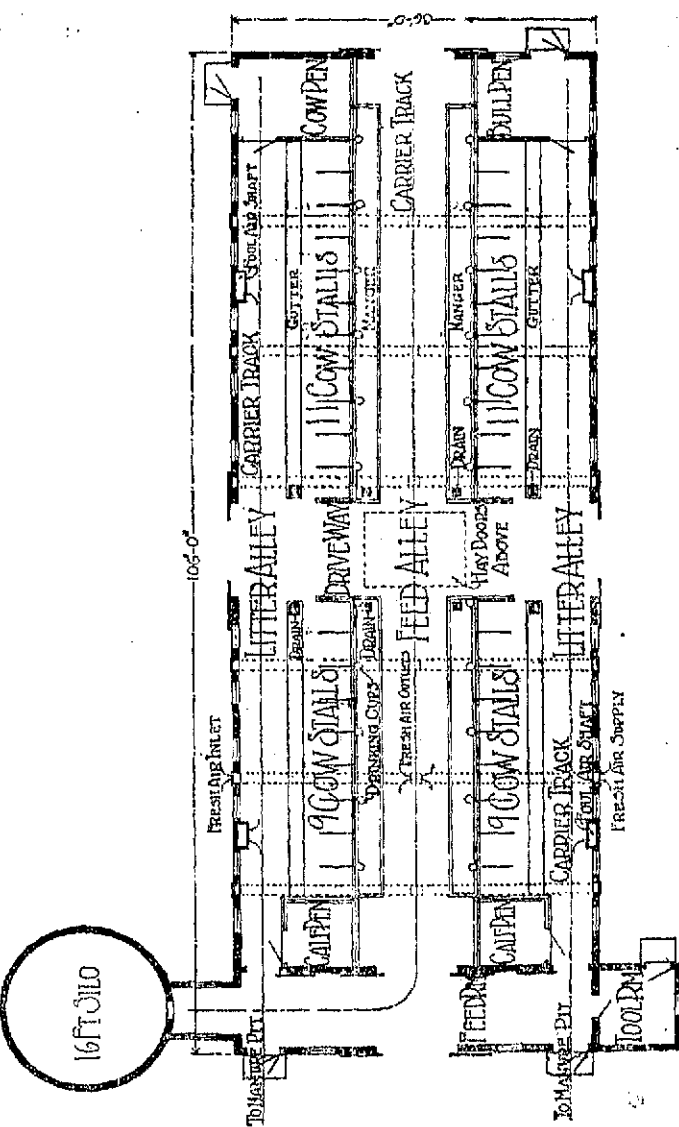

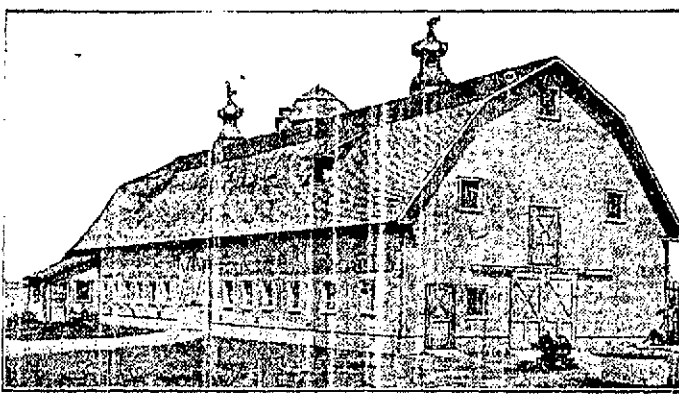

"Milk from contented cows" is the slogan made famous by one of the largest producers of canned milk in the world. In this method, in their advertising, they have quickly pointed out this one all-important idea. And how have they made it possible? By housing the cows in well-built barns that have plenty of fresh air, plenty of sunshine, clean and resilient stall floors, humane appliances and stalls and equipment for quickly removing litter and keeping the barn in top shape from a sanitary standpoint.

Inevitably, the cow living in pleasant surroundings will show her appreciation by increased production, whereas if conditions are the reverse her lessened ability to produce more and better milk will be manifested. And the cry of the ears of a dairy herd in the barn in which they are housed. We take it for granted that if the farmer has enough foresight to provide a good barn he certainly will not provide the wrong kind of feed. His mind does not work in that direction.

Such a farmer will build a barn of the character shown here. This is a handsome building, practical but attractive in design and certainly efficiently laid out.

A building will be just as strong as its foundation. Here we have a solid concrete foundation surrounded by a frame structure held together by heavy timbers and covered by serviceable siding. Rising as a suitable cover is a high gambrel roof, permitting of ample space for a large unobstructed haymow. One of the most important problems of the barn builder is the framing of the roof rafters. By certain standard methods he can build a roof that will not only be proof against the strongest winds and heaviest snows but at the same time it can be so built as to allow for a high mow with no posts out in the center of the floor.

On the lower floor are located the stalls, 40 in all. A delivery cuts through the barn in the center, short dimension, and provides a means of entrance for in cars and other vehicles loaded with hay, and other supplies to be stored in the mow above. Each stall has a window providing light and air to the animal occupant. The rows of stalls face in toward a central feeding alley running the length of the building at right angles to the main driveway. The stalls are fitted with feed racks and mangers. The stall floors have been paved with cobbles to provide a soft resilient surface for the animals. The main floor is solid concrete, contoured so as to provide gutters in the rear of the stalls for drainage and litter and pits for the manure in front of the stalls. Along the side walls at various intervals are four-inch shafts for drawing off the poisonous air which accumulates very fast. These shafts are connected with roof ventilators which water, which is one of the most important parts of the milk. In cold days, there is no need for driving the animals out to a trough which is covered with ice.

The equipment in this barn for relieving the strain of some of his heaviest work is also interesting. You will note over each litter alley and the feed alley between the stalls that there is an overhead carrier track. This track is used to carry away the litter from the stalls to the manure pit and in the case of the feed room to carry the feed from the feed room to the various stalls, eliminating all wheelbarrow pushing. This track carrier method has been found to be one of the most effective means of keeping the help satisfied. It takes much of the drudgery out of the work.

In addition to the stalls there are calf, cow and bull pens, feed room and tool room. The barn is 38 by 106 feet. A 10-foot aisle is also provided.

HAD TO JOIN THE PARADE

Colored Taxi Driver Was There, But Couldn't Be Said to Have Enjoyed It.

There was a Ku Klux Klan parade over in Virginia recently in which some colored men took an active and wholly unasked-for part. Colored people like parades, but, judging from the story of that colored taxi driver, that is still one kind of parade they will willingly miss.

This driver was approached on the street by a group of well-dressed men, who begged him to take them over into Virginia. The car went over the streets, and over the roads, and into the country.

After awhile the cars seemed to thicken. More and more cars were encountered. At last the taxi came to a halt in the road. Ahead was a bright light. The cars contained the strangest-looking persons, all garbed in white robes, with long pointed hats.

"Boss," exclaimed the colored driver, looking about the figures, "I guess I can't take you no farther tonight. Look at dem Ku Klux!"

Turning around to personally protest to his fares, his eyes were greeted by the sight of ten eyes peering at him from behind white cloth, while the white gowns seemed to fill the entire car.

The fares had quickly slipped on robes, and were all ready to participate in the parade. Much against his will, the colored taxi man was prevailed upon to continue, and thus became a participant in the parade—Washington Star.

Oratorical Limitations.

"What kind of orator is Senator Sponshewsky?"

"He's about the average speaker."

"Yes?"

"If he hasn't anything in particular to talk about he may discourse for an hour and a half, but if he has a message to deliver he can get it out of his system in thirty minutes."

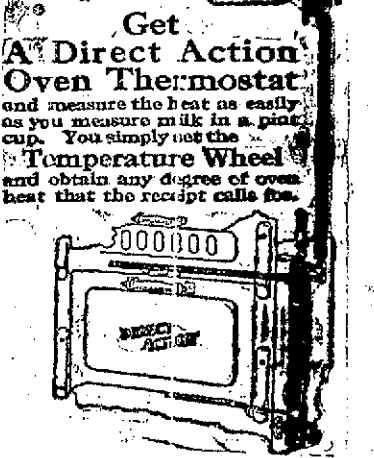

He Identifies.

"Hey! What the heck!" started a customer in the rapid-fire restaurant. "Looky here! There's dust, or something, on my put!"

"Huh!" returned Heloise, the waitress, after inspecting the dainty. "Don't bother all you're stung. That ain't dust, it's pepper."

OPEN ANCIENT CHEST

It Had Been Locked for Many Years and Was in Hell.

With courteous habits gathered in his office at Deane, O., visions of a hidden fortune danced before the eyes of those assembled. Probate Judge C. W. Palmer wielded a wrecking bar on the two giant padlocks holding the lid on a brass-bound chest. Brought from the West 37 years ago, it was claimed the chest had been unopened since that time. Breaking off the padlocks, the judge drew forth:

"Three money vests, a bundle of patent medicine advertisements, several pictures of pretty women, dressed in old-fashioned costumes and a sock filled with letters."

The chest was bequeathed by an uncle to Edward O. Beal, for whom a guardian had just been appointed by the court.

Drawing the Line.

"What kind of a game of golf do you play?"

"My friend," replied Senator Sponshewsky, "I am at all times in favor of reasonably frank disclosure. But I draw the line at pitiless publicity."

STORIES OF GREAT INDIANS

By Elmo Scott Watson

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

LITTLE TURTLE VS. HARMAR AND ST. CLAIR

ONCE upon a time George Washington flew into a towering rage. News of the defeat of Gen. Arthur St. Clair had just been brought to him. Striding up and down in his office, Washington stormed to his secretary: "My last words to him were, 'Beware of a surprise!' And now he has allowed that the army to be cut to pieces and his soldiers butchered!" Had his excellency told the unfortunate general that he was being sent against the craftiest and most energetic Indian leader in the country, Little Turtle (Mishikiquan), chief of the Miami, the result might have been different.

At the close of the Revolution, all efforts to pacify the tribes in Ohio and Indiana having failed, the government sent an army of 2,500 men under Gen. Josiah Harmar against the Confederation of Miami, Shawnee, Delaware, Ottawa, Shawnee, Delaware and Chickasaw led by Little Turtle.

The next year Washington sent St. Clair. Little Turtle launched a furious attack upon the general's camp early one morning and forced him to retreat. The retreat became a rout. For four miles the screaming savages raged at the heels of the stampeded army. Then Little Turtle stopped the pursuit. "We have killed enough of the white men. Let us now divide the spoils," he said. Next to Braddock's defeat, St. Clair's was the worst in the history of our Indian wars. He lost 630 killed, 250 wounded and all of his supplies.

Then "Mad Anthony" Wayne took the field and offered the Indians either peace or war. Little Turtle counseled peace. "We have beaten the enemy twice, but we cannot expect the same good fortune to attend us always," he told his warriors. "The Americans are now led by 'Black Snake,' the chief who never sleeps. Something whispers to me that it would be well to listen to his offers of peace."

One of the chiefs accused Little Turtle of cowardice. Stung by the undeserved charge, the Miami chieftain consented to attack Wayne. His fears were justified for "Black Snake" defeated them so badly at the Battle of Fallen Timbers in 1794 that the next year they sued for peace.

When Little Turtle signed the Treaty of Greenville, he said, "I am the last to sign it and I will be the last to break it." He kept his word. After that he led his people in the war of peace and worked for their betterment. Little Turtle died July 14, 1812.
